Featuring: The FlapJack Pack

This bag is my goto bag for work travel or when I do not ride my bike to work, which is usually only when I fly somewhere.

I picked this bag up 4 months ago and have used it constantly since then. It has been jammed in overhead compartments, shoved under seats, thrown in cabs, jammed in trunks and everything in between. But the best part? It still looks good enough for taking to a client meeting.

The bag has a front pocket that I use to carry things I need quick access to, like hand sani and ID badge.

There is a side pocket which PERFECTLY fits a power supply and iPhone cable so you can charge you gear while you wait to board the plane and not tear your bag apart looking for things.

Then in the bag there is a larger front compartment which I use to hold my keys, phone (in a soulrun sleeve) and headphones.

There is a padded laptop sleeve behind the main compartment which swallows my travel laptop.

And the shoulder straps and back look very nice, can hold a good deal of weight and once again, keep you from looking like you left your pocket protector at home.
