Osprey is debuting some amazing new packs to hit the stores Spring 2011. If you're a bike commuter, keep your eyes out for two great new packs designed with you in mind: the Momentum and the Metron.

The Momentum is weather resistant, hydration compatible and laptop friendly. It has a high-visibility reflective graphic to ensure cars see you, an integrated rain cover and a LidLock™ helmet attachment. A few other features include a blinky patch and a U-lock pocket. Side "briefcase" handles easily transition the pack from the bike rack to the office. Delivering a more streetwise look to bike commuting, the Metron has a high-visibility rain cover that deploys on the fly to keep your gear dry, padded laptop sleeve, smartphone pocket on the shoulder strap, internal organization for mp3 players, pens, and a LidLock™ helmet attachment.

For hikers, the Sirrus series is a women's-specific technical daypack with women's-specific harness, hip belt and three torso sizes to provide superb sizing and comfort. For ultralighters, the Hornet series are superlight packs that have been stripped to the bare essentials for ultra runners, adventure racers, peak baggers—anyone who aspires to move fast with minimal weight. The Hornet comes in three sizes: 24, 32 and 46 liters.

And mountain bikers? Osprey hasn't forgotten you. The Viper (men) and Verve (women) have a streamlined reservoir-to-pack interface and incorporates Osprey's unique ventilation system.
