Osprey has been selling hydration packs for some time now, but 2010 sees significant growth in their cycling line. Spring/Summer 2011 will see a new line of commuter packs as well as an expansion of their Hydraulics™ collection. They now offer something for every kind of cyclist, from the casual commuter to the hardcore mountain biker. Product highlights for SS 2011 include:

The Momentum series is designed with the avid bicycle commuter in mind. Whether the commute is beating city traffic or on rural roads avoiding highway speeds, these packs offer practical solutions for the bike commute lifestyle. Available in Bamboo and Carbide. Momentum 26 at $129; Momentum 34 at $149.

The Metron brings a street look to bike commuting with a messenger bag inspired flap design. Beyond biking across town, the urban styling of the Metron offers an easy transition to days spent riding transit, hitting the coffee shop, or traveling by air or train. Available in Black and Earth. Metron 25 $139; Metron 35 $159.

Osprey is expanding their line of hydration packs for SS'11 with the new men's Viper and women's Verve Series. Designed for mountain biking and hiking, they incorporate a streamlined feature set and a more simplified "reservoir to pack" interface than the current Manta and Raptor series. In addition to Osprey's signature Hydraulics features – the BPA- and PVC-free HydraForm™ reservoir and HydraLock™ System, which holds the water load securely, compressing as it empties, thus minimizing water slosh and bounce
