Osprey has teamed up with the Breast Cancer Fund to launch a special edition women's hydration pack. The Verve 10 is part of Osprey's new Spring hydration pack series for mountain biking and hiking that includes the extended Verve line as well as the Viper line for men.

The special edition purple Verve 10 is not only the Breast Cancer Fund color, but features the prayer flags the organization uses to honor those who have faced, or are currently facing, the challenge of cancer. For every special edition Verve 10 hydration pack purchased, $4 will be donated to the Breast Cancer Fund.

The Verve 10 comes with the BPA- and PVC-free HydraForm reservoir. Osprey's HydraLock System compresses the reservoir as it empties, reducing the dreaded water slosh and bouncing effect. The reservoir bite valve attaches magnetically to your sternum strap for quick access. Other pack features include the LidLock helmet attachment, giving you a simple and convenient place to store your helmet when you stop for a break. A loop at the bottom of the pack offers an attachment point for your rear blinker light.

The main front zippered compartment includes organizer pockets for your bike tools, spare tire and pump, as well as 10L of storage space for food and an extra layer or two. The top zippered pocket is fleece lined for safely stowing your sunglasses or electronics, or you could throw them in the dedicated shoulder strap pocket for easy access while you ride or hike.

The Osprey special edition Verve 10 retails for $84 and is available now.
