EDITORIAL REVIEW

The low-profile, 1,700-cubic-inch Comet has all the features a commuter needs to get from home to the office to the trail and back: tons of pockets for gear and file storage, padded sleeves for a laptop, tablet and MP3 player, and adjustable, removable straps for a tailored fit. But, that's just the tip of the iceberg for this versatile pack. It's loaded with other add-ons like a loop for a blinky light, a wire port for ear buds, convenient carry handles on the front and top, and reflective striping down the back for increased visibility. Some packs in this category are bulky, due to a long list of features, but the Comet's collapsible main compartment, made from a combination of rugged nylon and pack cloth, cinches down in a second and sits close on your shoulders and hips. Whether you're rolling by foot or by bike, for business or pleasure, the Comet is a perfect do-it-all companion.
