

Active Junky

June 9, 2013

Women's Backpacking Gear Guide

Featuring: Viva 65

Monthly Traffic: 11,473

URL: <http://tinyurl.com/1s2e564>

Osprey Viva 65

With 65 liters of packing room, this lightweight and comfortable backpack will carry everything you need for days and even weeks on the trail. Numerous torso and hip belt adjustments on the women's specific Viva ensure you get a custom fit. The entire back panel and shoulder strap system can be moved 5 inches up or down and the hip belt can extend up to 3 inches.

Our tester really liked the separate, wide mouth sleeping bag compartment, complete with a divider at the bottom of the bag. This compartment encourages you to pack your backpack just right, with the heavier items in the middle of your pack, closer to your back. Removable straps at the base of the bag come in handy for storing your sleeping pad, or even tent, and saving room inside your pack.

For those times when you need two hands free to scramble up over some rocks, your trekking poles can quickly be slipped through the storage system on the side of the pack without ever having to remove anything.

Best Use

Multi-day backpacking adventures where dexterity matters

Product Rating

Performance	8
Technology	7
Features	8
Fit	9
Style	8
Durability	8
Value	8

Score: 8 / 10
Best for Fit

