The Osprey Packs Beta Port messenger bag ($98.95) is one of those items that seem a bit unnecessary at first glance. Can't an iPad user get by with that old bag they've been using for years? How useful is the convenience of having quick access to the tablet?

A day with the Beta Port will leave many – in particular those who commute using public transportation – wondering how they could live without it. The 732 cubic inch bag has a sunglass pocket, shoulder strap, a 15-inch laptop sleeve and the top-zippered port. It's a compartment under the flap that has a plastic front through which the iPad's screen can be used. Talk about convenience; those days of taking out half the contents of your bag just so you can free the tablet are over.

The bag comes in four color selections.
