

GEAR PATROL

GearPatrol.com

February 17, 2014

Today in Gear

Featuring: Rev Series

Monthly Traffic: 948,640

URL: <http://tinyurl.com/n6f2bd6>

Osprey Rev

The Rev series is Osprey's vision of a technical trail running hydration pack, with a proprietary harness and belt designed to fit like a shirt. The reservoir has built-in baffles to reduce sloshing, and also has convenient features like a media pocket and bungee compression on the front panel.

$70

Today in Gear: February 17, 2014

TIG

TODAY IN GEAR

By BEN BOWERS on 2.17.14

DEFY x Horween Leather Overnighter

You've got your pick of supple black Austin Calf leather, authentic orange-ish basketball leather and Rio Latigo colored leather that looks rescued from Larry Bird's attic. All three have simple black military Ripstop parachute lining for easy cleanup and durability. $395

Marc Pro Recovery Aid

The Marc Pro uses two electrodes to create muscle contractions, which the company says sets off a "cascading series of physiologic events" that increase blood flow to muscles and remove waste to aid in recovery. The whole kit packs up to the size of a bagged lunch. $650

Yakima S.U.P. Brah

Come May 2014 Yakima will introduce its first SUP carrier with added protection for your board. Ignore the fratty humor. $30

Osprey Rev

The Rev series is Osprey's vision of a technical trail running hydration pack, with a proprietary harness and belt designed to fit like a shirt. The reservoir has built-in baffles to reduce sloshing, and also has convenient features like a media pocket and bungee compression on the front panel.

$70

