

Outdoor USA Magazine

August 2014

The 2014 Gold Award Winners

Featuring: Atmos AG 65

Circulation: 14,105

Readership: 56,420

••• The 2014 Gold Award winners •••

At the start of the OutDoor trade show the curtain is raised to reveal which companies received one of the 35 OutDoor Industry Awards. The awards go to products and technologies that demonstrate a particularly high degree of innovation and design quality and that have the potential to set new trends. In addition, there are seven gold awards (featured below) this year for exceptionally outstanding products. The awards are selected by a six-member jury of industry professionals. The people on this year's jury (pictured right) are Mark Held, the Managing Director for the European Outdoor Group, Boris Gnielka, an editor for Outdoor Magazine in Stuttgart, Ingalill Forslund, editor-in-chief at Utemagasinet, Christian Nothdurfter, purchasing manager of Mountaineering and Winter Sports at Sportler AG, Jurg Buschor, publisher of the Swiss magazine Outdoor Guide, and Lars Schneider, an outdoor photographer and journalist.

The
our nd
d.
g

Osprey Atmos AG 65 backpack

"At first sight, Osprey's Atmos AG 65 made us curious as a jury. The promising initial impression is confirmed when you put it on your back. The full-contact carry system literally covers the back and hips, but still allows good ventilation even when heavily loaded. With this carry system, Osprey has embarked on an interesting new approach, which requires no foam pads."

