

What Is the Best Luggage for Holiday and Winter Travel?

Bags for light, medium, and heavy packers

OutsideOnline.com

December 22, 2014

Gear Girl: What is the Best Luggage for Holiday and Winter Travel?

Featuring: Ozone 22"

Monthly Traffic: 2,298,000

URL: <http://tinyurl.com/nma3u95>

Between dodgy weather, overbooking, and long lines, holiday air travel can feel like a game of Russian Roulette. Choosing your travel kit wisely will help eliminate some of the uncertainty. Whether you're flying to British Columbia for a backcountry hut trip, jetting home to Chicago to see family, or sneaking off to Mexico with your SUP, these five stalwart, versatile bags won't guarantee your gear will make it to your final destination, but they will ensure that when it does, it'll still be in one piece.

Osprey Ozone 22 Wheeled Carryon ($230)

When carrying is the last thing you want to do with your carry-on, roll with the Ozone 22, a savvy, wheeled companion that's ideally sized for tight squeezes in the overhead bin or beneath the seat in front of you. Osprey makes some bomber gear, but at 4 pounds, seven ounces, the 46-liter Ozone is one of its lightest, most streamlined bags, with a brushed aluminum ergonomic retractable handle and three grab loops for slinging overhead. Six interior and exterior pockets help you pack smarter so you can move faster—proof that you don't have to skimp on perks to shave weight.

