8 Essentials for Run Commuting This Winter

Running to work is hard, especially when you have to contend with cold weather, poor visibility, and icy roads. On those days, your gear matters.

If you're serious about run commuting, you need a running-specific bag to stash water and your extra layers. We like the Osprey Rev 12, a torso-hugging hydration pack that accommodates a 2.5-liter water reservoir. Remove the bladder to make room for your work clothes (leave your dress shoes at the office), or keep it in for long commutes. Built for endurance events, this bag has a clever smartphone pocket on the left shoulder strap for quick access to your favorite fitness app.
