

Carryology.com

February 4, 2015

Best Active Backpack Finalists:
Third Annual Carry Awards

Featuring: Atmos AG 50

Monthly Traffic: 249,100

URL: <http://tinyurl.com/nyfpyab>

We thought we'd kick off the Third Annual Carry Awards with a bang! Best Active Backpack, a regular fan fav, seems to always bring out the best in brands, with performance and innovation the focal point.

And just to clarify for the masses: when we say the word 'active' we're not generally talking about big, lumbering hiking backpacks that you can shove your entire life into. We're talking about adaptable bits of kit that give you freedom to move, accelerate and push through space. Whether it be military issue rucks, slimline outdoor or bike packs, these all should haul diverse loads in comfortable ways.

In our nominees you'll see an eclectic bunch. Each of them has a target activity that they excel in, but each is also versatile enough that you can use it for travel or just for day-to-day activities. This is a hard one...but have fun and go for it!

Your voting form is latched to the bottom of this post. You have two votes to use as you will...

Osprey Atmos AG™ 50

Sometimes there's an itch that takes awhile to scratch, which was apparently the story with the AG™ (Anti-Gravity) suspension system for Mike Pfothenauer, the still active founder of Osprey. The AG wraps and warps and bends around you like a Playdo sculptured mesh, with awesome levels of comfort, breathability and movement. This is a substantial innovation, well deserving on any kudos fired into its atmosphere.

