Osprey Zealot 15

For one long ride, we stashed a day's worth of gear in the Zealot's main pocket and sucked water from the three-liter bladder. On rocky descents, the pack stayed glued to our back and the hydration hose didn't bounce — it locks onto a magnet. And when we got a flat, we opened the dedicated repair sleeve, which kept our tools, spare tube, and pump organized. [$140; ospreypacks.com]
