CLUTCH CARGO

by SAM MOULTON

One of the marvels of modern outdoor gear is that you can fit everything you need to eat (gourmet food), drink (good wine) and sleep (cushy sleeping bag) at a remote campsite into a comfortable backpack. Not only that, but thanks to the latest lightweight materials and innovative designs, you'll also have room for your favorite book and bottle of wine (see page 121 for how to safely transport it). Here are some of our favorite items to take with us into the wild.

11. OSPREY VOLT 75 PACK

The Volt is the Cadillac of packs, with enough room for weeklong trips and tons of pockets and lash points to quickly access and stash items on the fly. That said, you buy it for how it rides: A wire frame suspension system distributes the load to your hip (where you want it) and both the shoulder strap and hip belt can be easily adjustable mid-stride.
