

Bicycle Times

February 2014

Penny Candy

Featuring: Pixel Port

Circulation: 30,000

Readership: 87,000

PENNY CANDY → BY ADAM NEWMAN

We ride and review so many new products that we can't fit them all in the magazine. Head on over to bicycletimesmag.com to see more product reviews, as well as the latest news in the wide world of cycling.

BIANCHI METROPOLI - $600
Bianchi has been building bicycles for more than 100 years, and while the brand was built on high-end racing bikes, its city bike lineup excels as well. You can read our review of the stylish and practical Metropoli at bicycletimesmag.com/metropoli.

COMMUTER GEAR FROM BONTRAGER - $100+
Bontrager is the components and accessories brand from Trek, and while its name adorns everything from tire levers to carbon fiber wheels, we've been most impressed with its line of city and commuter goods. Read our reviews of this jacket and backpack combo at bicycletimesmag.com/bontragergear.

OSPREY PIXELPORT - $119
The "port" in the PixelPort refers to the window under the flap that lets you access your tablet computer without removing it from the bag. Perfect for crowded urban environments or drizzly days. Does it work as advertised? Read our review at bicycletimesmag.com/pixelport.

TRP HY/RD HYDRAULIC DISC BRAKES - $300
The integration of hydraulic disc brakes on road and cyclocross bikes has met with fits and starts. The Hy/Ry system from TRP Brakes is an exception, with no-brainer installation and excellent lever feel and modulation to match its stopping power. Will they change your mind about disc brakes? Read our review at bicycletimesmag.com/trphyrd.

OSPREY PIXELPORT - $119

The "port" in the PixelPort refers to the window under the flap that lets you access your tablet computer without removing it from the bag. Perfect for crowded urban environments or drizzly days. Does it work as advertised? Read our review at bicycletimesmag.com/pixelport.

