

Cult of Mac

Trek-worthy gifts for outdoor adventurers

CultofMac.com

November 24, 2014

Trek-Worthy Gifts for Outdoor Adventurers

Featuring: Exos 58

Monthly Traffic: 3,025,200

URL: <http://tinyurl.com/mesej32>

Going gear-shopping for your favorite outdoors-loving friend or family member can be harder than trekking up Mount St. Helens as she's about to blow. There are so many options, but so much crap.

To help you out with your holiday shopping, Cult of Mac waded through the endless lists of camping and hiking gear and gadgets to find the stuff your special someone will love.

Whether you're looking for something for an adventuring buddy, or picking a present for someone you'd never want to be trapped in a tent with, we've found gifts for everyone. From hiking clothes to campsite gadgets, we've got you covered.

Osprey Exos 58

Osprey's Exos 58 backpack is an ultralight bag, but don't let the name fool you — this baby can handle some serious weight. Whether you're taking it on an overnighiter or a four-day excursion, the Exos 58 is up for the challenge, making it one of the most versatile packs I've ever hiked with. It offers the best of both worlds, with an airy suspension that's lightweight, balanced and ridiculously comfortable.

The redesigned pack features an improved harness and hip belt to go with its breathable back-panel and ventilated shoulder harness, so you're not drowning in sweat while huffing it up the side of a mountain. With 61 liters of space, it can swallow all the gear you throw at it. Plus it comes with detachable loops so you can strap a sleeping bag to the bottom. If you're going ultralight, the top compartment comes off to minimize bulk.

Osprey Exos 58 – $156.95

Exos 58: an ultralight pack that can swallow gear and take punishment. Photo: Buster Hein/Cult of Mac

